A: Welcome back to RAM English Zone ‘strefa angielskiego’ on typical mistakes in English.

B: And today we’re going to discuss and explain 2 typical mistakes.

A: That’s right. The mistakes are: ‘It slept my mind’ and ‘I have better advices for you’.

B: So, please listen carefully if you want to speak better English!

A: OK, so where are we today? – Let’s choose a card.... (rustle)

B: Today we’re at the airport.

B: OK. Action...

A: Hi Verity.

B: Oh, hello – what, what, what – where are you going?

A: Oh, verity, we’re going to London together, didn’t you know that?

B: Oh, yes, we’re going to London, how wonderful.

A: It slept my mind to tell you that we’ll be going to the Ritz this evening.

B: No, it slipped your mind to tell me.

A: Oh, yes it slipped my mind.

B: It slipped your mind, but it actually also slipped my mind to tell you that we’re going to see the Queen this evening: Elizabeth herself.

A: Wonderful, what did she say to you?

B: She said to me: Verity, you must come to the palace to come and see me and Philip and all of the family, you must come.

A: Oh, fantastic. I hope she’s got some new corgis. I love those dogs.

B: Oh, I love corgis too. Um, what are you going to wear?

A: I think I’ll be wearing a tuxedo today and what about you?

B: Well, I have some better advices for you.

A: Oh, in English we say, I have better advice for you.

B: OK, I have some better advice for you. You’ll probably need to wash and wear something a little smarter than what you are wearing now.

A: And I have some better advice for you too. Instead of the wearing the large hat I would just wear the fox hat.

B: Wear the fox hat?

A: Ok, let’s put it into context.

B: It slipped my mind to tell you where we’re going tonight. I have some better advice for you about what to wear this evening.

A: Thank you very much. New RAM English Zone on typical mistakes.

B: With Terry Clark-Ward and Verity Duncan.
